THE EDWARDS (EDWARDS, EDWARDS)
EDWARDS

1625007

Origin of Name and Early History

The surname Edwards (Edwards, Edward) are common in England and Wales. The name is derived from the Old English word edra (meaning: happy or blessed) and weard (meaning: guardian or protector).

HISTORICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF THE EDWARDS FAMILY

The Edwards Family claim Edward or Edward, son of Alfred the Great as their ancestor. The name probably originated as Edward or Edward, in Anglo-Saxon records as Edward or Edward, which means the enclosure of Edward. The name is an important one in Wales, where one branch claims descent from Tudor Edward, a chieftain of the early progress. These are the records of the Castle of Edward, which is on the line of Edward, the first King. The name Edward is also found in the name of Edward, a powerful Norman Edward.

In England, the noble families of Kennelton and Lindsey are of Edward's blood. Lord Willoughby, a kinsman of William the Conqueror, founded one branch of the family with seats in Somerset, Cornwall, and Oxford, England. Sir Herbert Edwards, one of the greatest English soldiers of the 16th century is descended from an ancestor killed by Charles I in 1644. A formidable soldier, he was a knight and a member of the House of Commons. He was a gentleman of the Royal Chapel and Master of the King's Boys. His grandson, William, was one of the first of the Edwards to emigrate to America.

Richard Edwards died in 1866 at the "Edwards' Hall" in Cardiff, Glamorganshire, Wales. In 1810, this hall was burned when the three brothers, James, Robert, and William, sons of Richard Edwards, were killed. The hall was built and granted land for service rendered to the King.

Colonial Settlers and Descendants

Descendants of William Edwards

- I. William Edwards was the son of John and probably the grandson of Benjamin (son of William, the conqueror). He married Ann Harrison, sister of William Harrison's grandfather. Issues: Baydon; John; Gustavus; Benjamin.
- II. Baydon Edwards (1773-1802) son of William married Penelope Sanford in 1795. Issues: Benjamin; Sanford; John.

THE EDWARDS (EDWARDES, EDWARD)

FAMILY

1625007

Origin of Name and Early History

The surnames Edwards (Edwerdes, Edward) are common in England and Wales, signifying "son of Edward". Edwards is of Saxon origin and means blessed or prosperous guardian derived from the Saxon ead (meaning: happy or blessed) and weard (meaning: guardian or protector).

The Edwards Family claim Edward or Edward, son of Alfred the Great as their ancestor. The name probably originated as Udward or Adfert. In Anglo-Saxon records we read of Adfertton or Edwerdes-tune, which means the enclosure of Edward. The surname is an important one in Wales, where one branch claims descent from Tudor Trevor, a chieftain of mighty prowess. These are the Edwards of Sea Castle. Another branch is of the line of Roderick, the great king. The Edwards Hall located near Cardiff, Wales has been the home of a powerful line of Edwards. It was built by Godfrey de Lorrain, a Norman Knight in William the Conqueror's time and came into the Edward's Family's possession by marriage.

In England, the noble families of Kensington and Inglesay are of Edwards' blood. Lord Willbocuf, a kinsman of William the Conqueror, founded one branch of the Family with seats in Somerset, Cornwall, and Bedford, England. Sir Herbert Edwarde, one of the greatest English Admirals of the 17th Century is descended from an ancestor knighted by Charles I in 1644. A fashionable sonneteer, ready rhymist and dramatist was Richard Edwards (born 1533) in Somersetshire of Welsh parentage. He was a gentleman of the Royal Chapel and Master of Singing Boys. His grandson, William was one of the first of the Edwards name to emigrate to America.

Richard Edwards died in 1566 at the "Edwards' Hall" in Cardiff, Glamorganshire, Wales. In 1620, this hall was abandoned when the three brothers, Thomas, Robert, and William, grandsons of Richard emigrated to America to settle land granted them for service rendered to the King.

Motto - Fida Mobilitas Virtus -- Only mobility is virtue.

Edwards - (Hess Strange, Co. Galop, derived from Simon Tall, Lord of Tynlath, in Co. Denbigh, living 1182, son of Madoc, last Prince of Powys-Madoc) - For fesse sable and argent, a lion rampant counterchanged.

Crest - On a ducal coronet or, a tiger passant sable, armed of the first.

Edwards - (Barncott, Co. Galop and Co. Denbigh descended from Tudor Trevor, a chieftain of the Marches of Wales) - er bend sinister ermine and ermines, over all a lion rampant or.

Crest - A man's head sidefaced, in a helmet all proper.

Motto - Gratia Naturam Vincit -- Gracefulness Overcomes Nature.

Explanation and Description of the Coat-Of-Arms

Ermines - refers to one of the Heraldic Furs, and signifies a black field with white spots.

Or - signifies the color gold or yellow.

Canton - refers to the square occupying one-ninth part of the shield and placed in the upper left side of the shield.

Castle - is represented with one to three towers with a gate-way intervening.

Argent - refers to the color white or silver and denotes innocence and purity.

Fesse - is an honorable emblem. It is a broad band of either color or metal crossing the shield horizontally and having a width equal to one-third width of the shield.

Sable - refers to the color black

Counterchanged - refers to the alternate changing of metals and colors.

Wreath - refers to the garland or chaplet for the head or crest.

Fess noticed - this term is used as a diminutive of the fesse, being a quarter of its width. It is never borne alone, but usually in couples.

Martlet - refers to a fabulous bird, resembling a martin without legs, but with two tufts of feathers, appearing as if the legs had been torn out of the thighs. This is an honorable emblem and is a mark of distinction, denoting the fourth son.

Ducal Coronet is represented without ear, tassel, or ermine and with only five strawberry leaves when used as a crest.

Passant - is descriptive of beasts walking with head raised facing the left and with left paw raised.

Maned - is applied to maned animals, whose mane is of a color different from the rest of the figure.

Bend Sinister - is a band drawn diagonally from upper right to lower left and occupying a third part of the width of the shield.

Ermine - refers to one of the heraldic furs, and denotes black spots on a white field, in contrast to ermines.

Erased - means torn violently from the body, the severed parts being jagged and uneven.

Proper - refers to any figure, emblem or object when it is tinted in its natural color.
